AMUSEMENTS

Arthur H. Bell, George Peyton, Edwin Spears and Little Katherine Luce.
 Next week's play will be "A Bachelor's Honeymoon," by Charles Hoyt, the famous farce writer of other days.

Gayety.

"This Is the Life," a two-act musical "revue," handsomely staged, well equipped with a capable company, well above the average both in principals and chorus, is furnishing the holiday entertainment at the Gayety this week. Abe Reynolds as Jacob Rosenbloom; Jack McGowan, manager of a milliner shop, and George F. Hayes as a rube constable effectively perform their duties as laugh makers. While May Latham, a good soprano, has the leading feminine role and her work is well seconded by June Leary and Zella Clayton, both a surprise and a hit came from the ranks of the chorus, which sings exceptionally well. The plot, which was assisted by the chorus aggregation. Taken as a whole, "The Merry Ringers" is a play that is a merry purveyor of all the delights that come with a good burlesque show and ranks with the best of those that have entertained Gayety patrons this season.

Cosmos.

Max's International Burlesque Circus broke all records for attendance at the Cosmos Theater at the matinee yesterday afternoon and the performance last night, with its combination of the attractions of the real circus and burlesque imitations, including a comical street parade. The show is a little more than the usual burlesque, with a galaxy of fun-making clowns. Almost continuous laughter and applause attested the popularity of the act, which will remain the headline attraction all the week. The supporting bill opens with graceful and difficult feats on the swinging rings by the Bellemontes, man and woman; "Alexander" paints beautiful water color pictures, while the orchestra plays; Richard Carroll and three clever assistants keep the audience in laughter with the ridiculous situations of a typical popular vaudeville farce, "Handkerchief, No. 12," and Mada de Long wins both laughter and hearty applause for her character and original songs. "The Base Ball Fan" and "The Swedish Girl" scoring pronounced hits. The added attractions are headed by the Hearst-Selig news pictures, and the photoplay feature, "The Man Trial," shown only at 12:15, 4:45 and 6 p.m., is a thrilling story of the lumber camp, featuring Richard Travers. The new bill for the last half of the week will contain four original offerings, besides the circus and the farce, both being retained for their great popularity.

Film Features.

Loew's Columbia.

"The Immigrant," with Valeska Suratt as the Russian girl, Masha, heroine of the Lasky production, is providing a sensational interpretation of politics, crime and romance for audiences which have crowded Loew's Columbia since the play's presentation yesterday morning. To mention Miss Suratt is to vision an array of startling toilets, but while several are worn in her latest play, it is the actress who dominates the wardrobe. As the "immigrant," in the plainest of frocks, which, frankly, is more youthfully becoming than the gaudy robe worn later, the star is emotionally strong in her scenes with the man who has led her from love and life and especially in the climax, in which she warns the hero of the attack on his dam. Theodore Roberts handles a splendid supporting cast, and there is a thrilling panorama of a village flooded by the blowing storm. Additional features include travels in South America, a study of "Hereditry," as typed by the half-breed story of a white father; glimpses of Indians from a tourist point of view, and a really humorous little picture at motion war pictures, accompanied by the usual official warning as to "applause."

Crandall's.

At Crandall's Theater Sunday "A Soldier's Oath," picturing William Farnum and Dorothy Bernard, was shown. Yesterday's and today's special attraction is the thrilling photoplay, "The Labyrinth," in which Gail Kane is featured. It purports to be an expose of stage life and motion picture work in New York, and the story is worked out in its climax in a manner which is startling. Miss Kane's part calls for consummate dramatic ability.

Garden.

"The Golden Claw," featuring Bessie Barriscale in the Triangle program at the Garden Theater yesterday, tells the story of a woman reared in almost poverty who thrusts aside love for riches to her sorrow. In the picture cast are also Frank Mills, Trudy Shattuck, Wedgewood Noel and J. Barney Sherry. Weber and Fields, the well known comedians, are featured in the picture comedy, "The Best of Enemies," in which characteristic fun makes for laughter.

Strand.

At the Strand Theater yesterday, the photoplay features presented Emily Stevens in "The House of Tears," and Harold Lockwood, featured in "The Tragic Circle." "The House of Tears" tells the story of the revenge of a woman who forsook her husband and child for a Wall street magnate, who afterward deserted her, while "The Tragic Circle" is a blend of pathos and humor.

Leader.

At the Leader this week Sunday's bill featured the Paramount picture, "The Heart of Jennifer," in which Hazel Dawn is pictured. Yesterday Marguerite Clark was a picture delight to her admirers in the child role in "Still Waters," a story of canal boat and circus life. This feature is being repeated today. Orchestral accompaniments are provided.

Empress.

Thea Bara was pictured yesterday at the Empress Theater in "Destruction," a tale of the mines and the factories. It deals with the sweat, the grime, the heartaches and the stifled ambitions of labor. It is said to have been founded on the labor troubles that recently arose in New Jersey and Colorado. Many thrilling scenes of riot are pictured. James Furey, Gaston Bell, Carleton O'Connor, Esther Roder, Warner Oland, Herbert Frank, Frank Evans and Arthur Morrison are in the picture cast. The Empress has obtained exclusive rights to the first Washington showing of productions from the Fox studios.
